As a symbol of the new era of recreational spaces and urban living, the residential project Existencia with building heights of 20 meters is located at Strandpromenaden. It is a combination of a residential tower with several leisure facilities, a large shopping mall and a modern office tower. A unique feature of the building are the separate individual floors that are moving. When looking from the street one can see a roller coaster - an elevator-style lift that transports you through the floors. The design also offers views to the south-eastern and the southern from the top floor. The views are complemented by wonderful city views and sceneries as the building design includes several unique elements. Such as floating platform, panoramic elevators or a swing with views of the streets of Malmö. They focus on the liveability and function of public spaces and the individual live-work apartments, which are designed as workspaces. The concept of an individual floor holds for both the private residences and the public areas such as malls and offices. The different units offer a variety of typologies and finishes, in order to fit the different needs of the users. The residential building is complemented by a shopping mall, where people can buy clothes, shoes, groceries and other retail items. The glass façades and the large open space on the mall and residential floor, create a truly free-spirited urban environment that is also flexible and secure. The office tower in Existencia is one of the most modern office towers in Malmö. The offices are equipped with all modern services, such as wireless internet and 24 hours reception, making them the ideal workplace. It also offers a well-equipped gym and a seminar hall, in order to attract and retain new employees and establish a creative working atmosphere. Star Control 2 - Zero Wing Final Release Added Gameplay Star Control 2 - Zero Wing is a fan-made remake of the first Star Control for Microsoft Windows. It is fully playable and has the same "First Contact" mission. However it plays as a much more linear experience, in contrast to the HUB and Expansion Packs which can be played from the start. This is mostly due to the different endings and character sprites that would be used for a third party. There is also a Terran, Confederate and Cyon AI, a good variety of races, races using the star ship designs from the "Official Expansion" and the "Official Convention" pack, and a new soundtrack. You can play the game in two modes. With "AI" you can play the game as any of the three races, or you can play as a human as a space marine or a Trinary officer. History Zero Wing was created by Jeffrey "Mandrill" Veregge, who was inspired to create it after seeing the game play well on his aging IBM compatible PC. He made his first attempt at the game in 1995, before he even started college. He changed the game to be more on the Quake mold but could not find the time to finish it. The original prototype was a single.wav file which was composed in MatLab. Jeffrey used Visual C++ for the conversion to be an.exe. The game started as "Starflight with Alien Enemies" but later developed into Star Control. Jeffrey originally thought that the game would be just a clone of Star Control 1, but after finding that the quality of the engine on the Internet was not up to his standards he decided to remake Star Control 2 with better graphics. In order to have more control of the game he decided to remake it with Delphi Pascal. The soundtrack he used for the game was composed and played by the band The Mr. Mister for their album Up From Below. Jeffrey also decided that the game would be a remake of Star Control 1 rather than Star Control 2, and the character he chose to play was Zefram Cochrane. He also took the idea of having more choices in the endings that were used in Star Control 2. Release Jeffrey released the game at QuakeCon 1997, and the first version to be released to the public was the alpha version. The game originally was only made for Windows 98 and Windows 2000. A port to OS/2 Warp 3 was also

The Cooking Game is a BBC television game show which aired on BBC One in the UK and on PBS in the USA during the 1983-84 term. Contestants try their hand at cooking dishes like marmalade and Yorkshire pudding. In most cases, a food item is obtained from a shop, along with the ingredients to make it; contestants were not expected to follow recipes. The show became notable for including Ann Trotter (b. 1932), wife of John Elphick Trotter (1910-84), the Man for All Seasons. Show format The categories The main categories were as follows: Best coffee - initially, a "mystery ingredient" part of the show was also awarded the title of 'Best coffee'. The category was changed to just 'Best coffee' and was then replaced by 'Best coffee and bean'. From Series 5 onwards, judges made their own coffee and came second. In Series 3, all four contestants prepared tea. As the series went on, judges were given the freedom to dispense with such ancillary aspects in order to create a more open competition and showcase cooking ability, making it the most open judging competition used in any of the BBC game shows. Best mushroom - derived from the original "best mushroom" competition Best Dessert - normally made up of several categories, which were used in order to celebrate the majority of sweets available. From series 1 onwards, a berry pie category was also added. Best chip - derived from the original "best chip" competition. By Series 2, (in which Sainsbury's supermarkets ran a similar programme - 'Sainsbury's "Chip Around"') competitors made their own spread. In the 'Best European mystery' round, they are given an exotic ingredient and have to find the European country where it is grown. Best instant mixed drink - originally a case of judges choosing what they liked best from stock available Best frying - similar to "Best chip" but contestants needed to make food for more than one person. Best New-Meal - the contestant's home made food was judged against a set of 'Minimum Requirements' Best ready meal - based on a set of 'Minimum Requirements'. Each of the seven series had a different theme.

Series 1 (1983): The location was in the late 1980s
Series 2 (1984): Eight episodes were filmed in London between August 1984 and December 1984
Series 3 (1985): "Champions of the 1980s".
