A: You cannot, for legal reasons. The product is registered as XENTRY, which means it was made by XENTRY, so you can't distribute the product without the right of XENTRY. The fact that it is embedded in the MAC firmware as part of a branded application is probably irrelevant, because there are no explicit copyright rules that would prevent their use in this case. One consistent fact about the top college basketball teams is that they are always decent, even if they aren't in the most talented conference. However, there is a growing trend in the top conferences that isn't all that common at the mid-major level: Terrell Bell is leading the Pac-12 in scoring. This weekend at the Bill Snyder Family Holiday Invitational, Bell hit the rare milestone of posting 25 points in four straight games for his first career triple-double. The senior guard from Arizona averaged 17.3 points, 11.3 rebounds and 10.0 assists over the four games, outscoring opposing point guards. In the past, fans of the Arizona Wildcats have been decrying the fact that Bell went unnoticed by NBA scouts. However, even though Arizona's star guards are now gone, as well as their high-scoring wing, the Wildcats still don't look nearly as good as they have in the past. But Bell is producing at a high level. It was also nice to see Arizona's other star, sophomore guard Deandre Ayton, make his return to the lineup after he broke his foot over the offseason. However, it was Bell's return to form that was the big story for the Wildcats. The other bright spot in the NCAA tournament is that there is a correlation between Bell's play and Arizona's surging season. So far, the Wildcats have won 15 games including going 5-2 in their last seven contests. Bell has shown that he could be a difference maker for this team. He also has helped the Wildcats not only win games, but somehow come out of some tight situations. The Wildcats are among the top-10 teams in the country after a 7-10 start in Pac-12 play.
